

pure performance serums

Our serums are designed to create visible change to the skin. If we cleanse and hydrate our skin correctly then we can maintain healthy skin. If we want to reduce the signs of aging due to environmental damage and other factors then we need to target these challenges directly with a specific product. Advancement in science has meant that we now have the opportunity to work with the skin more closely. Fine Lines, skin tone, discoloration, age spots, skin texture can now be targeted with visible results.

Cutting edge technology sees peptides supporting failing skin functions, fighting secondary effects of external antagonists by restoring skin tissues physiological functions. Peptides are chains of two or more amino acids, scientifically designed to address concerning skin conditions. These peptides can compensate for disorders related to aging and aggressions through their regenerative capacities.

The aim being to restore skin homeostasis.

The glycation process can dramatically affect the skin and its condition.

It has been established that excess sugar can lead to a variety of health concerns; too much sugar can also affect the skin. If there is too much sugar in the body, protein molecules can cross-link with sugar molecules. Once this cross-linking process has occurred, the new sugar proteins are called advanced glycation end products (AGEs). The human body does not recognize AGEs as normal, and will produce antibodies that cause inflammation in the skin. Inflammation dramatically affects the skin and the body. Once formed, AGEs tend to gravitate toward dermal collagen and elastin.

As people age, proteins in the body can become damaged through the introduction of AGEs—one of the key factors in aging of the skin. The more sugar you eat, whether processed or natural, the more AGEs are produced. When the body is overwhelmed with AGEs, collagen becomes compromised. Effects of the glycation process at the cellular level of the skin's structure may result in wrinkling, loss of elasticity, stiffness, accelerated aging and compromised barrier function.

In keeping with our philosophy of working with nature we have taken the best that our earth has to offer teamed that with the latest in innovation and peptide technology. Our aim is to provide the very best in both these domains. Thanks to the scientific study of all the processes that occur within our skin, peptides are capable of reaching the target areas through inhibiting, stimulating or accurately mimicking the biological mechanisms (biomimetic). All our ingredients are chosen for their purity, their performance and with a commitment to the environment in mind.

By including a serum into your daily range you have the potential to specifically target the areas of concern for the individual. Should you not want the use of a "peptide" we have options that are focused on ingredients directly from nature such as supernatural8.

The dosages of each active vary depending on the product it is blended into and the other peptides/ ingredients present. Our percentages are between 3-10% in accordance with optimum efficacy.
